Red curry

-Red curry paste in coconut milk, bamboo shoot, bell pepper and sweet basil.

[While still spicy and a bit sweet, this plays to your savory taste buds more than green curry. The color comes from the bigger red chilies used to create the base. The chilies are crushed with garlic, lemongrass, shallots, ginger and shrimp paste and added to coconut milk. Red curry is spicier and less rich than yellow curry.]

Green curry

-Green curry paste in coconut milk, bamboo shoot, eggplant, bell pepper and sweet basil.

[This curry leads with a sweet flavor, followed by a little heat from chilies and salty umami from the fish sauce. What's essential to know is that all Thai curries start with different curry pastes made up of entirely different combinations of fresh herbs and spices.]

Yellow curry

-Yellow curry paste in coconut milk, potato, white onion topped with fried shallot.

[The yellow curry base is made of plenty of turmeric, cumin yellow mustard seed, nutmeg, kaffir lime leaves and juice. While you will find different variations across Thailand, yellow curry contains coconut cream in addition to the coconut milk, and has a rich taste with a sweet, milder flavor than the red and green curry.]

Panang curry

-Panang curry paste in coconut milk, bell pepper, topped with coconut milk sauce and kaffir lime leave.

[Panang tastes like Thai red curry but has additional coconut milk that makes it thicker and richer. Compared to Thai red curry, Panang is mildly spicy and sweet.]

Massamun curry

- Massamun curry paste in coconut milk, potato, red onion and peanuts.

[Massamun doesn't pack as much heat as the other curries, so it's a good place to start if you want to try something less spicy. It's heavily influenced by Indian curries and is by far the sweetest of all the curries. The base is made of cardamon, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, and generally comes with chunks of potato and topped with peanuts. The flavors of this curry are slightly sweet and sour from tamarind concentrate.]
